We want you to write for Barouyg.

What is Barouyg?

A new magazine, for Spyurkian thinkers.

Barouyg is an Armenian, Montreal-based, youth-led magazine publishing creative and analytical work. Our mission is to create a space for discussion among young Armenian creative and critical minds. Rather than focusing solely on cultural self-preservation, we search for new Spyurkian ways of thought and conceptions of identity.

We created Barouyg because we want to meet and gather young Armenians from various communities and educational pathways, and with diverse interests, to think together about issues that concern our everyday reality.

We're looking for young university and college students in Montreal, who wish to write in Armenian, English, or French, and who are interested in sharing ideas and insights about our collective Spyurkian identity, such as on the topics of studenthood, culture, art, music, literature, politics, science, philosophy, and history. We accept all types of written submissions, such as opinion pieces, essays, memoir, poetry, short fiction, profiles, interviews, and reportage, that bring out a nuance of Armenian-Spyurkian reality.

Why should you write?

Writing is activism. Writing in Barouyg means contributing to the landscape of ideas shared in our community. You will be able to meet new people as well as encounter new ideas, and participate in new dialogue between Armenian students.

If you want to write an article for our first issue, or if you have any questions or curiosities we might be able to help with, please contact us right away at editors@barouyg.org.

Best wishes,
